In the State Lotteries, now wisely abolished by the Legislature, the chances were so greatly against the adventurers, that according to the Schemes, the purchaser of the whole Lottery would lose half his money. Few, therefore, but the imprudent, the inconsiderate, and the desperate, became buyers of Tickets and Shares. Should the exigencies of the Nation render the revival of Lotteries necessary, it is suggested that by making the chances more equitable, that if the Government, instead of a profit of one half, would be contented with a sixth or an eighth, the sale of Tickets would be so much increased among the prudent and respectable classes of Society, and on the Continent of Europe, that the gain to the Treasury would be greater than before, and the system of puffing, fraud, and fallacy by which the former Lotteries were supported and disgraced, would no longer be required.

In the second century of the Christian Æra, the Empire of Rome comprehended the fairest part of the earth, and the most civilized portion of mankind. The frontiers of that extensive monarchy were guarded by ancient renown and disciplined valour. The gentle, but powerful influence of laws and manners had gradually cemented the union of the provinces. Their peaceful inhabitants enjoyed and abused the advantages of wealth and luxury. The image of a free constitution was preserved with decent reverence:

So shalt thou live beyond the reach

 Of adverse Fortune's pow'r;
Not always tempt the distant deep,

And lives contentedly between
 The little and the great,

It was this king, who, in the ninth year of his reign, first gave by charter to the city of London, the right of electing annually a mayor out of its own body, an office which was till now held for life. He gave the city also power to elect and remove its sheriffs at pleasure, and its common councilmen annually. London bridge was finished in this reign: The former bridge was of wood. Maud the empress was the first that built a stone bridge in England.

THE first Act for erecting Turnpikes was passed in 1662. The stations for them at that time being Wadesmill, Caxton, and Stilton. The general and permanent improvement of Roads did not ensue till the reign of George II, and was opposed by the ignorant and prejudiced. Nocturnal meetings of the misguided peasantry for the destruction of Toll-Bars, were, at this period, frequently punished by the arm of the Law.

Learning and Rome alike in empire grew;
And Arts still follow'd where her Eagles flew;
From the same foes, at last, both felt their doom,
And the same age saw Learning fall, and Rome.
With Tyranny, then Superstition join'd,
As that the body, this enslav'd the mind;
Much was believ'd, but little understood,

Fir'd at first sight with what the Muse imparts,
In fearless youth we tempt the heights of Arts,
While from the bounded level of our mind,
Short views we take, nor see the lengths behind;
But more advanc'd, behold with strange surprize
New distant scenes of endless science rise!
So pleas'd at first, the tow'ring Alps we try,
Mount o'er the vales, and seem to tread the sky
Th' eternal snows appear already past,
And the first clouds and mountains seem the last:
But, those attain'd, we tremble to survey
The growing labours of the lengthen'd way,
Th' increasing prospect tires our wand'ring eyes,
Hills peep o'er hills, and Alps on Alps arise!

When the House of Hanover took possession of the throne, it was reasonable to expect that the zeal of Addison would be suitably rewarded. Before the arrival of king George, he was made secretary to the regency, and was required by his office to send notice to Hanover that the Queen was dead and that the throne was vacant. To do this would not have been difficult to any man but Addison, who was so overwhelmed with the greatness of the event, and so distracted by choice of expression, that the lords, who could not wait for the niceties of criticism, called Mr. Southwell, a clerk in the house, and ordered him to dispatch the message. Southwell readily told what was necessary, in the common style of business, and valued himself upon having done what was too hard for Addison.

LONG PRIMER, No. 7.

It is still affirmed that Russia will soon take military possession of Moldavia and Wallachia: the roads begin to be passable; and the Russians seem purposely to have deferred their operations to this time; so that they have not at all been disconcerted by the slow progress of the negociations at Constantinople. It is certain that the Turks cannot defend these two provinces, and that they have always been obliged to evacuate them, whenever since the time of Catherine II. the Porte has been at war with Russia. The Turkish Government is so sensible of this, that in case of a rupture, it will content itself with having these countries laid waste. The Musulmen troops are said to have already received orders in consequence.

MINION, No. 7.

Although the weather was most unfavourable and wet on Monday evening yet there were several hundred elegantly dressed persons at Vauxhall, enjoying its acknowledged attractions, vocal and instrumental in the Rotunda, Orchestra, and of the beautiful Heptaplasiessoptron, the French Theatre and in the Ball-room, and the fine and extensive promenade of the Colonnade, capable of containing Ten Thousand persons perfectly secure from inconvenience from the weather. We understand that it is the intention of the spirited Proprietors of this delightful retreat, hereafter, on rainy evenings, to illuminate the Colonnade, Rotunda, Ball-room, Pavilion, &c. with the utmost brilliancy; a canopy is preparing for public accommodation, and to enable Longuemare to exhibit his surprising evolutions on the Tight Rope, which he seems to vary with increasing interest nightly, so that in future, with the exception of the Fire Works and Ascent, by these judicious arrangements, no disappointment even from the weather can arise to prevent the numerous and fashionable admirers of this favourite and elegant resort from giving an uninterrupted attendance.

NONPAREIL, No. 4.

CASLON LETTER FOUNDRY.

CAΣLON and LIVERMORE respectfully submit to the Printers in general, but especially to the Publishers of Newspapers and Periodical Publications, these New Founts, in which their aim has been to combine the beauty of the Modern with the clearness and durability of the Ancient style of Typography, and to produce types at once handsome, legible, and useful. They assure them that the greatest care shall be taken in the composition of the Metal with which these and all their other founts are cast. They embrace this opportunity of returning their sincere thanks to their numerous friends and customers, who will, they trust, be of opinion that they have, by this Specimen, redeemed their pledge of rendering their Newspaper Founts equal, if not superior, to any that have hitherto appeared. This Nonpareil can, if required for Advertisements, be cast on Pearl.

These are thy glorious works, Parent of good!

Almighty! thine this universal frame,

Thus wond'rous fair! thyself how wond'rous then!

Unspeakable! who sitt'st above these heav'ns,

To us invisible, or dimly seen

In these thy lowliest works: yet these declare

Thy goodness beyond thought, and power divine.

Speak ye, who best can tell, ye sons of light,

Angels; for ye behold him, and with songs

And choral symphonies, day without night,

Circle his throne rejoicing; ye in heav'n.

On earth join all ye creatures to extol

Him first, him last, him midst, and without end.

I do remember an apothecary,—

And hereabouts he dwells,—whom late I noted

In tatter'd weeds, with overwhelming brows,

Culling of simples; meagre were his looks,

Sharp misery had worn him to the bones:

And in his needy shop a tortoise hung,

An alligator stuff'd and other skins

Of ill-shap'd fishes; and about his shelves

A beggarly account of empty boxes

Green earthen pots, bladders, and musty seeds,

Remnants of packthread, and old cakes of roses,

Were thinly scatter'd to make up a show.

Noting this penury, to myself I said—

An if a man did need a poison now,

Whose sale is present death in Mantua,

Here lives a caitiff wretch would sell it him.

Thou, who the verdant plain dost traverse here,
While Thames among his willows from thy view
Retires; O stranger, stay thee, and the scene
Around contemplate well. This is the place
Where England's ancient barons, clad in arms
And stern with conquest, from their tyrant king
Then render'd tame, did challenge and secure
The charter of thy freedom. Pass not on
'Till thou hast bless'd their memory, and paid
Those thanks which God appointed the reward
Of public virtue. And if chance thy home
Salute thee with a father's honour'd name,
Go, call thy sons: instruct them what a debt
They owe their ancestors; and make them swear
To pay it, by transmitting down entire
Those sacred rights to which themselves were born.

PEARL DIAMOND.

Quoniamque tandem abutere, Catilina, patientia nostra? quamdiu nos etiam furor iste tuus eludet? quem ad finem sese effrenata jactabit audacia? nihilne te nocturnum presidium palati, nihil urbis vigilie, nihil timor populi, nihil consensus bonorum omnium, nihil hic munitissimus habendi senatus locus, nihil horum ora vultusque moverunt? patre tua consilia non sentis? constrictam jam omnium horum conscientia teneri coniurationem tuam non vides? quid proxima, quid superiore nocte egeris, ubi fueris, quos convocaveris, quid consili ceperis, quem nostrum ignorare arbitris? O tempora, o mores! Senatus hoc intelligit, consul videt; hic tamen vivit. Vivit? imo vero etiam in senatum venit: fit publici consilli participes: notat et designat oculis ad cedem unumquemque nostrum. C H A P. I.

1 The creation of heaven and earth,
sc. 26 Of man in the image of
God. 29 The appointment of food,

In the beginning God created the heaven and the earth.

2 And the earth was without form, and void, and darkness was upon the face of the deep: and the Spirit of God moved upon the face of the water.

3 And God said, Let there be light: and there was light.

4 And God saw the light, that it was good: and God divided the light from the darkness.

5 And God called the light Day, and the darkness he called Night: and the evening and the morning were the first day.

6 And God said, Let there be a firmament in the midst of the waters, and let it divide the waters from the waters.

7 And God made the firmament, and divided the waters which were under the firmament, from the waters which were above the firmament: and

8 And God called the firmament Heaven: and the evening and the morning were the second day.

9 ¶ And God said, Let the waters under the heaven be gathered together unto one place, and let the dry land appear: and it was so.

10 And God called the dry land Earth: bringing together the waters called He Seas: and God saw that it was good.

11 And God said, Let the earth bring forth grass, the herb yielding seed, and the fruit-tree yielding fruit after his kind, whose seed is in itself, upon the earth: and it was so.

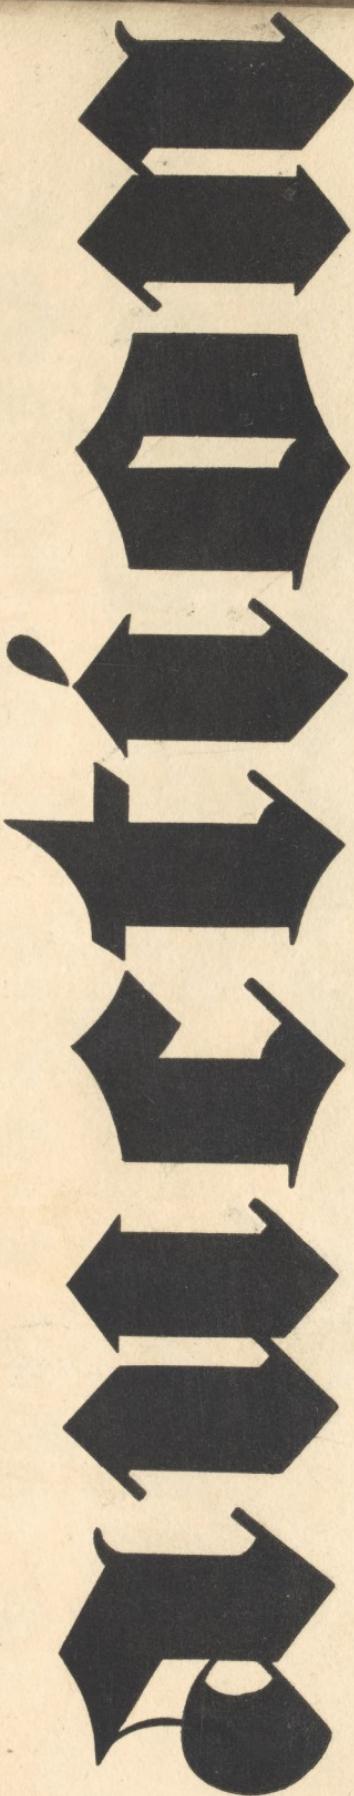

12 And the earth brought forth grass, and herb yielding seed after his kind, and the tree yielding fruit, whose seed was in itself, after his kind: and God saw that it was good.

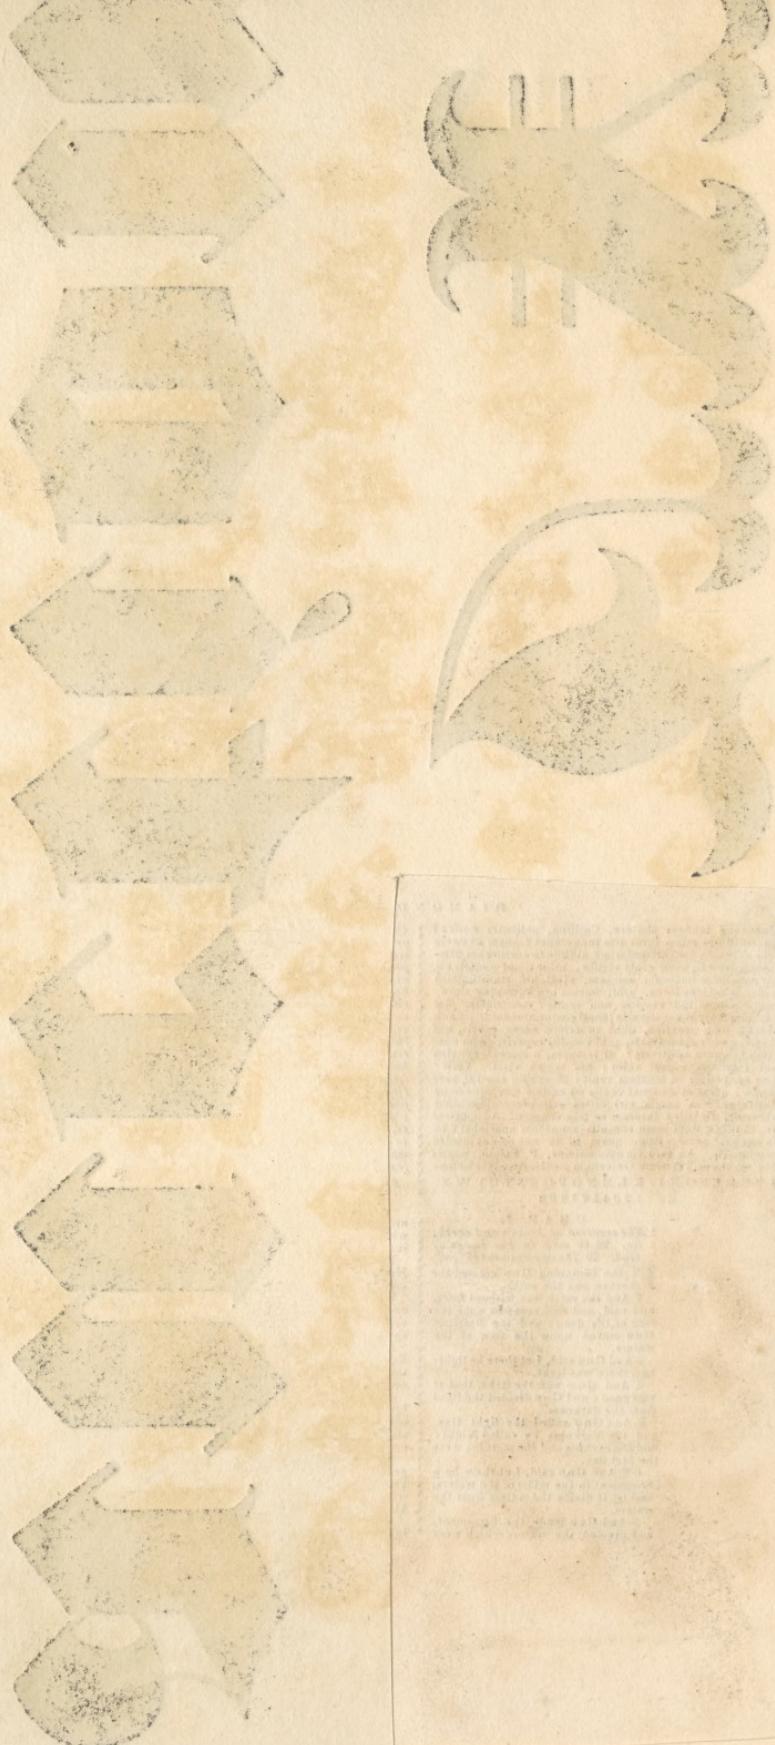

13 And the evening and the morn- ing were the third day.

The image shows a decorative page border from an old book. The border is composed of a repeating pattern of stylized, ornate letters, likely Hebrew, arranged in a grid-like fashion along the top, bottom, and right edges. The letters are rendered in a dark, bold, and highly decorative script, with many intricate flourishes and variations in shape. The background of the page is a light beige or cream color.

Double Pica Script, No. 1.

British Statesmen, in deciding on the comparative cheapness of a British, compared with a Foreign, article, should fix as an invariable rule for their calculation, that the article which, in its supply or production, gives the greatest portion of profitable employment to our people in the aggregate, is always cheapest to the State, although it may appear, for want of due consideration, to be the dearest to individuals, as our revenue can for a continuance only be paid, and our national wealth and political power increased or diminished, but in the ratio of the profitable employment of our population.

Great Primer Script, No. 2.

Ladies and Gentlemen,

Permit me to solicit the honour of your votes and interest at the approaching election for the office of President to your estimable and useful Association. My claim to your notice is founded on age, long practice in the usages, customs and routine of the Society, ardent wishes for its successful continuance, and, I hope I shall be allowed to add, a disinterested desire to promote its welfare and diffuse the objects of its foundation by my humble efforts. United in the cause of benevolence, virtue and religion, long may our noble and patriotic establishment continue to prosper. No selfish, vain, or ostentatious motive prompts me to request your support. The favour of your suffrages and my elevation to the chair will be flattering to my feelings, but want of success will not diminish my ardour for the glorious cause in which we are all embarked.

I remain, with profound respect,

Ladies and Gentlemen,

Your most obedient and devoted

Caleb Quotem.

London, March 15, 1830.

English Script.

To the Printers of the United Kingdom.

Gentlemen,

We submit to your judgment our new English Script, which is the smallest that has hitherto appeared in this Country. Several judicious and experienced Printers who have favoured us by approving of and using our Great Primer Script have nevertheless objected to its size, and observed that one smaller was a desideratum. Acting upon this suggestion, we have produced the present Specimen, and it is hoped some improvement on our first attempt will be discerned. In this font the Double Letters are complete, which, it is presumed, will render the junctions more regular, and the composition more simple.

We remain, Gentlemen,
Your faithful and obliged Servants,
Caston and Livermore.

 Finsbury Square.*
